
IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE DISTRICT OF UTAH

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Plaintiff,

v.

ERNEST RAY QUINN,
Defendant.

MEMORANDUM DECISION AND ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT'S
MOTION FOR SENTENCE REDUCTION

Case No. 2:14-CR-474 TS

District Judge Ted Stewart

This matter is before the Court on Defendant's Motion for Sentence Reduction. For the reasons discussed below, the Court will deny the Motion.

I. BACKGROUND

Defendant was charged with felon in possession of a firearm and ammunition and possession of methamphetamine with intent to distribute. Defendant pleaded guilty to possession of methamphetamine with intent to distribute. The Presentence Report concluded that Defendant qualified for an enhancement as a career offender, resulting in a guideline range of 188 to 235 months.¹ The Court imposed a sentence of 150 months' imprisonment, as was recommended by the United States. Defendant now seeks compassionate release. Defendant contends that he suffers from medical conditions, including prior exposure to COVID-19, that pose a much greater risk of severe complications or death if he were to contract COVID-19 while in custody.

¹ Defendant is currently challenging that determination in a proceeding under 28 U.S.C. § 2255.

II. DISCUSSION

“A district court is authorized to modify a Defendant’s sentence only in specified instances where Congress has expressly granted the court jurisdiction to do so.”² 18 U.S.C. § 3582(c)(1)(A) allows the Court to modify a term of imprisonment under certain circumstances. Relevant here, the court . . . upon motion of the defendant after the defendant has fully exhausted all administrative rights to appeal a failure of the Bureau of Prisons to bring a motion on the defendant’s behalf or the lapse of 30 days from the receipt of such a request by the warden of the defendant’s facility, whichever is earlier, may reduce the term of imprisonment (and may impose a term of probation or supervised release with or without conditions that does not exceed the unserved portion of the original term of imprisonment), after considering the factors set forth in section 3553(a) to the extent that they are applicable, if it finds that . . . extraordinary and compelling reasons warrant such a reduction.

Where, as here, a defendant has fully exhausted his administrative rights,³ the Court may reduce a defendant’s term of imprisonment where: (1) “extraordinary and compelling reasons” warrant a sentence reduction; (2) the sentence reduction is consistent with “applicable policy statements issued by the Sentencing Commission;” and (3) the reduction is consistent with the Court’s consideration of the 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) factors.⁴ In two recent decisions, the Tenth Circuit has held USSG §1B1.13 is not presently an “applicable” policy statement that controls the definition of “extraordinary and compelling reasons” when a prisoner initiates a §

³ The United States disputes that Defendant exhausted his administrative remedies. However, Defendant has provided a request made to the warden on January 5, 2021. Docket No. 76-7.

3582(c)(1)(A) proceeding.⁵ Instead, “the Sentencing Commission’s existing policy statement is applicable only to motions for sentence reductions filed by the Director of the BOP, and not to motions filed directly by defendants.”⁶ Because there is no policy statement “applicable” to § 3582(c)(1)(A) motions filed by prisoners, the Court has the authority to exercise its independent discretion to define the term “extraordinary and compelling reasons.”⁷

Defendant contends he suffers from several health conditions that put him at a higher risk of severe complications or death from COVID-19. However, Defendant has received two doses of the Moderna vaccine.⁸ A number of courts have held that a fully vaccinated individual, such as Mr. Quinn, cannot show an “‘extraordinary and compelling’ reason within the meaning of Section 3582(c)(1)(A) when the motion is based on COVID-19 concerns.”⁹ The medical evidence supports the conclusion that Defendant’s risk of death or severe illness is dramatically reduced given his vaccination status. Thus, Defendant has not shown “extraordinary and compelling” reasons for a sentence reduction.

Even assuming Defendant’s medical conditions, in conjunction with the COVID-19 pandemic, qualify as extraordinary and compelling reasons for a sentencing modification, he still must show that a sentence modification is warranted under the 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a) factors.¹⁰

The Court has considered those factors and concludes that Defendant's requested relief is inappropriate. Defendant was identified as being responsible for distributing methamphetamine in central Utah. A search of Defendant's home and car revealed narcotics and firearms. Defendant has a serious criminal history that includes violent conduct and drug-related offenses. The sentence Defendant received reflects the seriousness of his conduct as well as his significant criminal history. That sentence is also necessary to provide deterrence to this Defendant and others, and to protect the public. Therefore, release is not appropriate under the relevant factors.

III. CONCLUSION

It is therefore

ORDERED that Defendant's Motion for Sentence Reduction (Docket No. 76) is DENIED.
